The Ascot Brim.

Hats for Ascot this year were made of black lace or chalk white straw with very wide flat brims and little pot crowns shorter than ever, in fact, they just sat on the head, but it is amazing how comfortably. Even without the elastic grip they seemed to perch safely, and looked very smart.

The white straw brim with a black lace crown had a short black lace border dipping at a short depth all round the edge of the brim.

FRUIT PATTERNED SATIN GOWN

Paris. A gown of fruit-patterned satin is very attractive. Two or three of the top buttons at the back are left unfastened, so that the edges of the dress fall away, revealing fashion.

LINEN ACCESSORIES

Linen accessories give your navy blue suit, or dress a fresh touch that is both fashionable and charming. Try a plain white linen collar, deep cuffs and a linen-covered purse. Incidentally, linen purses have removable covers that can be taken off and washed frequently.

The Woman's Page

The Discovery Of Lastex

Modern Dress Has Been Revolutionised.

CLOTHES THAT REALLY FIT

The discovery of lastex has been one of the century's romances. While women have been bemoaning the fact that constant wearing takes the shape out of their woollens and evening cottons and silks, four scientists, two in England and two in America, have been working in their laboratories, pressing threads of elastic through infinitesimally small holes and binding them with wool and cotton, linen and silk, trying to evolve a material that will neither stretch out of shape nor sag.

New Discovery

The result is lastex. After much research scientists in England and scientists across the water in America announced the new discovery, simultaneously and independently.

A London correspondent writes: "I attended a demonstration, for the first time in this country, of a full range of fashion garments which had been elasticised. It was pointed out that in the thousands of years in which textiles have been made, the four staple commodities, wool, cotton, silk, linen have only been added to twice—once by rayon and now by lastex yarn. This yarn, which is being manufactured extensively at Birmingham, and is giving work to thousands of British workpeople, consists of a patented elastic core (with properties which differ from those of ordinary elastic), around which is spun silk, cotton, linen, or wool, according to the type of fabric in which it is to be employed."

Hats That Fit

"Quite apart from the obvious advantages of skirts and jackets made of a fabric which will never go out of shape this yarn is likely to revolutionise trade methods. For instance, in the millinery industry, one of the biggest problems has been that of sizes: The new double stretch fabrics have made it possible to manufacture hats in three sizes only, which will cover the entire range of requirements. By introducing the yarn into stocking tops, the risk of ladders caused by suspender strain, is greatly minimised. An insert of the magic threads is knitted into the top of the stocking. The same idea is applied to the tops of men's halfhoses and half stockings, which entirely eliminates the need for suspenders."

"Gloves, in common with millinery, have been much simplified. Manufacturers are preparing to manufacture them by the million for the coming autumn season. In soft and elegant meshes. Here, again, three sizes will suffice for the needs of normal womanhood. By means of a tiny insert across the instep of court shoes, this popular form of footwear will be made to cling closely to the foot without the discomfort of cutting across the instep."

For Sports Wear

"I watched while a mannequin demonstrated had been elasticised. Tweeds and linens—even linens may be treated in the new way—fitted slimly and exquisitely and yet afforded scope for the most strenuous drive in golf, and the most Lengen-like activity on the tennis courts. Another girl strolled on in the most immaculate or jodhpurs for riding wear, immaculately-fitting around the knees, and yet without a trace of any fastening.

In the case of swimming suits and lowcut evening gowns, the effect of the lastex weave is to control the figure. In the case of evening gowns, by ingenious manipulation it is possible to create a gown that also performs the function of a corset."

Breton Sailor Hat.

Of the bevy of modes with which the millinery salons were invaded this year, none has found such rapid popularity as the Breton sailor. This is largely due to the fact that it is a becoming style for women of all ages.

One of the many versions of this picturesque mode is carried out here in fine canvas in a natural shade, with a gay note of colour provided by the corded ribbon in a cherry shade. The brim turns up all the way round.

A New Silk Material

Combination Of Silk And Organdie.

THE SILK FROCKS PERSIST

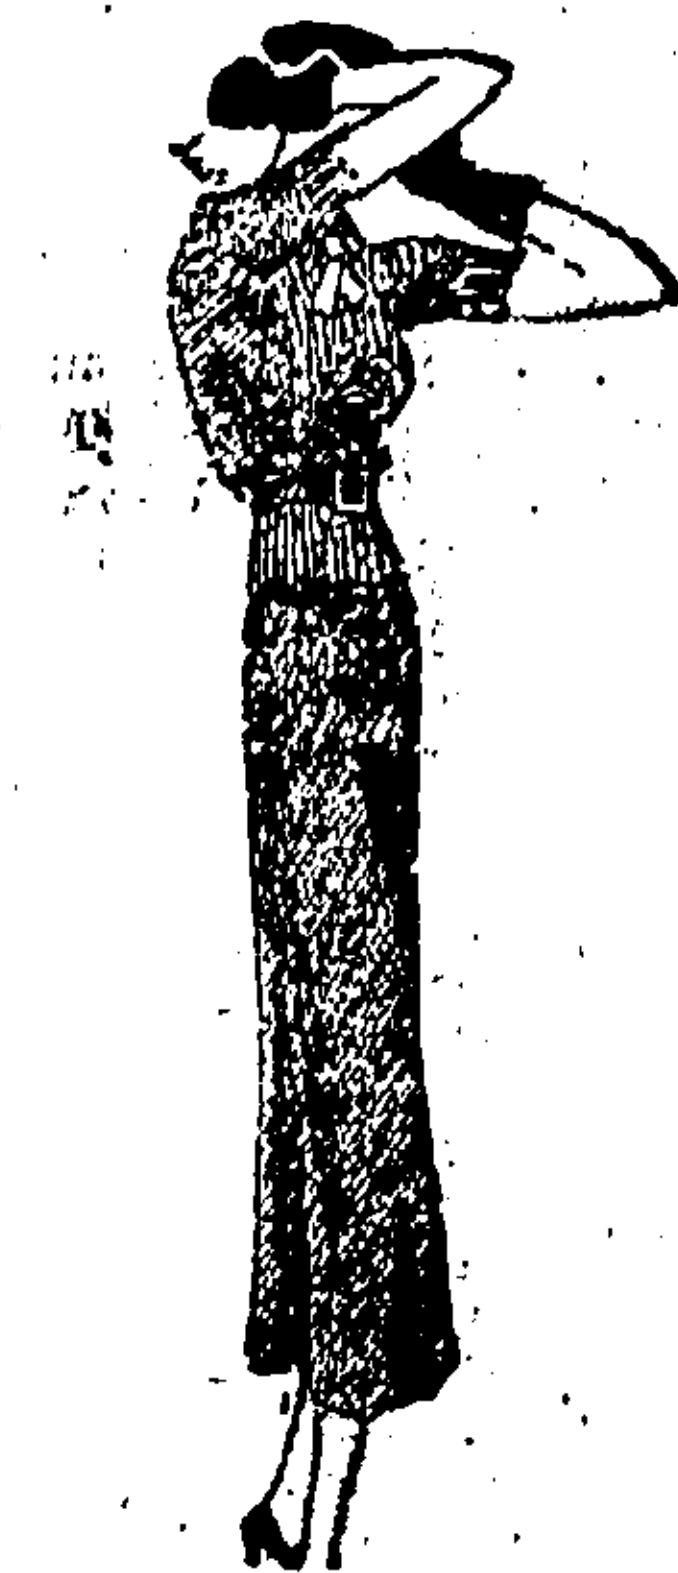

The variegated silk frock with the long coat not only, dies hard but insists on living lustily. Light dresses are worn with dark coats, most of which are belted, with emphasis on the belt. This either varies in colour or else has a long and striking metal clasp.

The are metal clips to correspond on the dresses, and when the neck has a back V this is held down with a metal clip and makes a pretty line. For the afternoon there are a good many ankle-length frocks. Some of these have a frilled basque and also frills at the elbows. Silks are of all kinds, but taffeta has pride of place.

A number of silks are copied from old models, Persian and Chinese. Many have a fine stripe. There are flowered and otherwise patterned crepes. These dresses may have a coat, but are more often worn with fox furs.

Long Lines for Evening Frocks.

Evening frocks keep their long lines, and some of them have trains. With the dark frocks petticoats are worn, mostly in cream colour and with a good many frills. When the train is picked up the frills show. Other dresses are merely shoe-length. Here the soft crepes have taken to imitating taffeta, just as taffeta has taken on of the suppleness of crepe.

The new material is organza, otherwise silk organdie. This is soft and silky and looks particularly well in an evening frock with a wide, stiff metal belt and with metal armholes. A bright green with this to its great advantage.

Flowered Taffeta is important among the evening frocks. It is gay and bright. The material is much less stiff than formerly, but it makes its accustomed wish. Metal belts are distinctive everywhere. One dress has a belt of plaited elephant's hair fastened with a clasp.

Glowing in Satin

White satin, consistent in beauty and rugged, again comes forth in a gorgeous creation, draped around the lovely Pat Peterson, screen actress, in the evening gown, silver bugle beads form shoulder straps, outlining a back cut to the waist. Spangled silk tulle is used for the series of ruffles as well as for the collar.

THREE DRESSES FOR SUMMER OUTFIT

Printed Silk Day Frock.

SUITABLE CLOTHES FOR HOT DAYS

Paris. The perfect summer wardrobe should include a printed frock with crisp fingeré touches, a dark silk jacket dress and some sort of a lightweight woolen coat and another silk dress, printed or plain. Three such costumes are not merely a nucleus for a daytime town wardrobe—they are a complete wardrobe in themselves.

The navy blue silk dress with matching jacket seen recently has a soft cowl neckline banded with natural linen to match the stitched linen on the windblown revers and cuffs of the little coat.

The jacket is one of this season's most interesting types. It is plain and snugly fitted through the back and the front fullness is held in place by a sash belt.

This is an ensemble that will withstand commuting and any amount of hard wear during the hot months.

Confetti Print.

A confetti print—a colourful new print pattern in the smart, small all-over effect was another model seen. It has long, slim lines and rather full sleeves that taper down to button snugly at the wrists.

A huge jabot of mousseline de sole gives the dress an air of crispness that will be appreciated when dog days descend.

BRIDGE NOTES

PLAYING THE HAND.

by Ely Culbertson.

No matter how much the importance of making a plan of play is stressed, Bridge players frequently find that in the stress of actual play, perhaps because of inattention or routine, or perhaps because they think "nothing matters," bad mistakes are made.

Though these mistakes are often glaring and result in defeated contracts, the player who makes them usually finds it very hard to condemn them as strongly as he should.

The question of entry and re-entry from one hand to the other is a matter of supreme importance. The lines of communication between the two allied armies—the hand of the Declarer and that held by his partner, for the moment the Dummy—should be kept open at all costs. Military strategists appreciate the importance of this. Bridge strategists should be just as intelligent.

In a recent rubber Bridge game at Crockford's Club, New York, it must have required all the self-control which South could summon to keep him from delivering a lecture to his partner based upon the above text, as a result of the manner in which North played the hand below:

South, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South West North East
1C 1S 2H (1) 3S
4NT (2) Pass 5C Pass
6H Pass Pass Pass

1—North's free bid at this point is justified through the possession of a five-card suit, the singleton Ace of the opposing suit and the fact that he can stand a Rebid of clubs by his partner.

2—It is apparent to South, with almost any kind of a hand North may hold, to give a play for a Slam; hence the minimum four-notrump bid, which shows two Aces and the King of a bid suit.

East opened the spade 5. When North won this trick with the Ace he led a low heart to the Queen in Dummy, and West won the trick with the Ace. West then returned a heart, upon which North played the nine, and when East failed to follow he won the trick in his own hand.

He then led the Knave of trumps to draw West's last trump and left the lone King in Dummy. The next play was the nine of clubs. Of course, East did not cover and North took the necessary finesse. The finesse held and another club followed, upon which West failed to follow.

Thus by adroit maneuvering North had succeeded in putting himself in a position where he had to go down 1 trick when by the very simple expedient of unblocking the trump suit he would have had a very valuable re-entry into his own hand to take the third finesse in clubs and thus secure the necessary discards.

Obviously North should have taken the second round of hearts with the King in Dummy and the third with the nine in his own hand. Then when the club finesse held, he should have returned to his own hand with a high heart and again taken a club finesse.

TONS OF DOPE

Production in China Rapidly Growing

MANCHURIA AS BASE

(By RONALD WOOLFREY)

Twelve thousand tons of opium are produced in China every year and the total is rapidly increasing. This estimate was put forward by Mr. Fuller, the American representative on the Opium Committee of the League of Nations. Chinese production, according to this authority, is seven times greater than in the rest of the world. The accumulation constitutes a danger not only to China itself but also to other countries.

The League's Opium Committee met during May in the full knowledge that the East was becoming a danger-spot to the rest of the world. Definite evidence is now turning what was formerly a suspicion into a certainty. Chinese opium, smuggled into the United States, is causing a recrudescence of drug addiction. The Canadian authorities believe that the greater part of clandestine importations of drugs come from the Far East. No doubt other countries can tell similar stories.

China, it may be claimed with some show of reason, is today being exploited by foreign drug traffickers. The use of modern highly concentrated drugs such as morphine and heroin is replacing, to a large extent, the old habit of opium smoking. At the same time, as pointed out by Sir Malcolm Delevigne, the British delegate at Geneva, Chinese interests are also concerned in the secret manufacture of and trade in drugs. Important seizures of "dope" and an explosion in a factory have shown the extent to which the evil is spreading.

Perhaps the worst plague spot is to be found in Manchuria and Jehol. Since the Japanese invasion and consequent establishment of a puppet State, China of course cannot be blamed for what is going on north of the Great Wall. Certain it is that Manchuria is a convenient base for flooding many Chinese provinces with narcotics, while distant continents are potentially exposed to a similar danger.

In the past, the mobilisation of world opinion through publicity provided by the League of Nations has been a powerful weapon for "cleaning up" such centres of the drug traffic as Turkey. The League's task in the East appears a formidable one, but it will not relax its efforts until once again the traffickers have been outwitted.

Cinema Notes

"COME ON MARINES"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

The leading role of Lucky Davis, a swaggering, devil-may-care marine sergeant, is characterised by Richard Arlen, in "Come On Marine". Paramount's current release.

Lucky Davis, who was sent back to the Philippines for misconduct, soon wins back his chevrons when a ship sinks off the coast and a boatload of children is marooned on the shore.

When Lucky and his Marine comrades arrive at the little settlement where the children are staying, it turns out that the "children" are beautiful debutantes just dying for romance, and Lucky has his hands full keeping the Marines away from the girls, and his eyes open for bandits.

Supporting Arlen in the cast are: Ida Lupino, Roscoe Karns, Bradley Virginia Hammond, Gwen-Hill Gill, Clara Lou Sheridan, Toy Wing, Lona Andre.

"MY WEAKNESS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

Lillian Harvey, who gained prominence by her splendid work in "Congress Dances" and "My Lips Betray," is featured in the latest Fox production, "My Weakness." Lew Ayres, one of the screen's most popular actors, plays opposite to Miss Harvey, and the supporting cast includes the two clever comedians, Charles Butterworth and Harry Langdon. A host of Hollywood's prettiest chorus girls also take part in the picture.

"THE LOST PATROL"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

An excellent cast of notable actors, including Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford and Reginald Denny are featured in the R.K.O. Radio picture, "The Lost Patrol." The film is based on the novel, "Patrol," by Philip MacDonald, and its action takes place in the desert, where a British regiment of troops are cut off from their comrades. The stand against the Arabs is thrilling and highly entertaining.

"THE PRIZE-FIGHTER AND THE LADY"—STAR THEATRE

The former world champion boxer, Primo Camera, and Max Baer, the present holder of the title, make their debut in the films in a thrilling story of the ring. "The Prize-Fighter and the Lady." Myrna Loy, who takes the leading feminine role, is seen as a beautiful night club entertainer who falls in love with Max Baer, a young prize-fighter, who is struggling against powerful odds to secure the title.

Others in the cast are Walter Huston, Otto Kruger and Vince Barnett.

BANDIT CHASED BY PLUCKY GIRL

Captured On Tram In Sydney.

BOOTY RECOVERED

Sydney, N.S.W.

Struck on the head with a loaded piece of hose, and robbed of £295, Miss Elsa Gregorson, pluckily chased a man from a city bank until he was captured on a tram.

An employee of Posters Shoes, Ltd., Miss Gregorson, who is slim and only 5ft. high, was transferring the cash from one branch of the Commercial Bank, Martin Place, to another.

As she passed a man in the vestibule he lunged a newspaper in her face and struck her on the head. Then he seized a wallet containing the money and fled.

The man leapt on to a tram outside the bank. Miss Gregorson, who was running in pursuit, called to onlookers to hold him. As three constables grappled with the man a loaded piece of hose fell to the ground.

A bank official picked up the wallet in the vestibule. Later a man was charged with having assaulted and robbed Miss Gregorson.—Reuter.

Mr. Cushny is a South African and is very glad to be back in his home town.

He would not discuss the famous Moscow trial, which ended in his being expelled from Russia, but he stated that he was glad to have to come to a town where the amenities of life are infinitely better than in Russia.—Reuter.

THIEF CONVICTED BY BLOOD TEST.

Housebreaking Proved.

Copenhagen.

A blood test has sent a young man named Jensen to prison for three months here on a charge of housebreaking.

He was arrested on suspicion, but denied all knowledge of the crime. A sample of his blood was analysed together with bloodstains found on a broken windowpane of the burgled house.

Experts declared that the blood in both tests was that of the same person.—Reuter.

LIONS' REIGN OF TERROR

East Africa District Suffers

FAMOUS HUNTER EMPLOYED

Beira, Portuguese East Africa. "One Shot" Araujo has taken the jungle trail again.

Acknowledged King of big game hunters in Portuguese East Africa, he has responded to an appeal by the Governor of Mozambique to hunt a troop of eight man-eating lions which have been terrorising the district of Vila Machado.

Already, the lions have devoured two men and a woman and attacked many more. They have also killed countless cattle.

Many of their raids have been carried out in broad daylight—a remarkable deviation from custom, since lions generally prefer the cover of darkness for hunting.

Senhor Araujo, a railway superintendent at Beira, earned his nickname by his deadly skill with the rifle. When stationed near the Zambezi, some years ago he accounted for 15 lions and 23 leopards with a single shot each.—Reuter.

THE MEN WHO OWN LONDON

A few years before the public had gaped at reports of his sale of a large slice of the west of London for £4,000,000.

A handful of other landlords own, or have owned, considerable sections of London. Among them are Dulwich College, with two square miles, and Lord St. Germans and Sir Spencer Mayson-Wilson, to whom is attributed nearly as much.

To-day the old estates are dwindling. They are passing, acre by acre, into the hands of great trusts and companies, whose rule is often more strict and less human than that of the former individual owners. It is only the poor individual Londoner, who lives there, who has nothing to say about his city. It isn't his.

Hendren And Leyland Save England

One Run Under Test Record For Fifth Wicket

ENGLAND 355 FOR 5 WICKETS

A fifth wicket stand of 191 by Hendren and Leyland, one run short of Brand and R. E. Foster's 1903-4 Test record, enabled England to total 355 for 5 in the third Test match against Australia at Old Trafford yesterday.

London, To-day.

The third test match at Manchester commenced in very hot weather, but the wicket was perfect.

No fewer than 25,000 spectators were present on the grounds, some of them having made a night-long vigil to gain admittance.

R. E. S. Wyatt, the English captain, won the toss and elected to bat first.

The English team was: R. E. S. Wyatt, C. F. Walters, G. O. Allen, Sutcliffe, Hammond, Hendren, Leyland, Verity, Hopwood, Clark and Ames. Keeton was twelfth man.

Clark, who was stated to have strained a leg muscle during the week, reported himself fit and well, and was included in the eleven.

W. H. Ponsford made a welcome return to the Australian team, and E. H. Bromley was relegated to twelfth man. The Australian XI consisted of W. M. Woodfull (Captain), D. G. Bradman, S. J. McCabe, C. V. Grimmett, W. J. O'Reilly, W. Oldfield, W. A. Brown, L. Darling, A. G. Chipperfield, W. H. Ponsford and T. Wall.

Wyatt, as expected, sent in Sutcliffe and Walters to open the batting. Both men batted cautiously but runs came steadily, 50 being scored after 48 minutes.

Early Collapse

When the score reached 68, the first disaster befell England. Walters played a ball from O'Reilly short leg, where Darling made no mistake with the catch. The Worcester captain had scored 52 out of the total of 68, mainly through delightful cover and straight drives. He made several forceful leg strokes and included eight fours in his innings. Sutcliffe, who was butting carefully had scored only 16.

Worse luck was in store for England when Wyatt joined the Yorkshire opening bat. With no addition to the score the English skipper was dismissed, being clean bowled by O'Reilly for a duck! Going in second wicket, down, Hammond shared the same fate as Wyatt. After scoring only 4 runs, he was also bowled by O'Reilly. The scores being 72 for 3 wicket.

The sudden collapse was caused by O'Reilly with his first, second and fourth deliveries after play had been stopped for drinks. During this time umpires examined and discovered a fault with the ball, which was changed with disastrous results for England.

"Patsy" Hendren joined Sutcliffe at the crease and the two men absolutely refused to take any risks.

After 95 minutes' play, the score-board showed exactly a hundred.

Hendren survived a leg before appeal, and shortly afterwards, nicked a ball off Chipperfield dangerously near O'Reilly, who was fielding at backward point.

Sutcliffe and Hendren kept their wickets intact until lunch, which was taken with the total at 126 for 3 wickets. The former had added 49 and the latter 21.

Sutcliffe Cautious

Sutcliffe did most of the scoring immediately after lunch; but he did not stay long. With the addition of only 23 runs on the board and after he had taken his own score to 63, he was held in the slips by Chipperfield off O'Reilly. He had been an invaluable and flawless innings, which was featured by cover-driving and forceful leg shots. He hit 8 boundaries.

The score was then 149 for four wickets.

Hendren was not dismayed at the dismissal of Sutcliffe and continued to play copy-book cricket. Leyland had joined him and was occasionally aggressive.

Hendren reached his 50 in 110 minutes, while Leyland also reached his half-century, taking 95 minutes. At tea-time, the two were still together, the score being 253. Hendren had 80 not out and Leyland 50 not out.

During the afternoon, Don Bradman and Chipperfield both developed sore-throats and had to leave the field. They did not play again yesterday, being replaced by Bromley and Barnett.

Almost Record Stand

Hendren's glorious innings came to an end when the score was taken to 340. He was caught and bowled by O'Reilly when he had made 132. He revelled in the hook shot and pulled and drove with great power, sending the leather crashing to the boundary on 22 occasions.

He took 255 minutes to make his runs, and was given a great ovation when he returned to the pavilion.

Leyland with a mixture of care and aggression in his batting, had made 93 during his stay at the wicket of two hours.

Hendren and Leyland put on 191 runs and failed by only one run to equal the record for the fifth wicket partnership.

Ames, who had joined the Yorkshire left-hander, had four to his credit when stumps were drawn with the score at 355 for five wickets.

R. H. Human, the Cambridge skipper, displayed encouraging form on the eve of the 'Varsity' match with an innings of 129 at Lord's, where the 'Varsity' match will commence on Monday.

The Light Blue Bowlers, however, were treated with scant respect, and the University lost by 170 runs.

F. C. de Saram, the former Ceylon boy, who shared the distinction of scoring the first century this season with Ashdown, was seen at his best at Reigate where his innings of 208, out of 399, was mainly responsible for Oxford's fine win over H. D. Leveson-Gower's XI.

TO-NIGHT'S GALA

ROZA-PEREIRA AND E. B. DA ROZA CHALLENGERS

Marques Favoured For Breast Stroke

INTERESTING CARD FOR SEASON'S OPENING GALA

(By G. L.)

The Victoria Recreation Club's first swimming gala for this season, which will be staged to-night at 9 p.m. sharp, promises to provide some very startling performances by the club swimmers, who are among the fastest in the Colony.

With a delay of over a month in the commencement of the Club's galas, preparation for to-night's races have been given careful attention, and a very enjoyable evening of fast and exciting racing is promised.

The main feature on the programme is the 100 yards "A" class race, in which the three fastest men in the Colony over this distance will take part. W. Lawrence, who won the V.R.C. and Colony championship last year, is in fine fettle, and many believe that his best time of 59 4/5 is likely to be bettered.

He will be strongly challenged, however, by Lionel Roza-Pereira, the Colony's long-distance champion, and E. B. da Roza.

Several fast swimmers, who made good progress during last season, will add excitement to this race, among whom are T. L. Paget, H. Ozorio, the University champion, and A. A. da Roza.

Breast Stroke Hopes

Still smarting from the loss of the Club breast-stroke championship, which passed into the hands of the Chinese Athletic Association swimmer, Lam Yiu, last season, the V.R.C. are now making determined efforts to retrieve their lost honour.

This season has seen a more spirited attempt by the Club breast-stroke experts to regain their former standard in this style than in any previous year. The Club now has four star men who are gradually improving their times in the breast-stroke, and to-night will see them out in their first open race.

E. M. Marques, who won his heat last Thursday in the creditable time of 79 4/5 seconds, is the favourite for this event.

He will be closely challenged by H. M. Remedios, former Colony champion, and B. Gosano, the fastest Club member last season. Marques should improve on his time, and is likely to set a new mark for Club members.

Lam Yiu, however, won the championship last year in 77 3/5 seconds, and it is not expected that Marques will be able to improve on this time this early in the season.

Miss Round took a set off Helen Wills-Moody in the Final last year. Miss Jacobs is taking part in her third Final.

GERMAN ACE WINS CYCLING CLASSIC.

English Crack Beaten At Hesne Hill.

HORN WINS 5-MILE POINT TO POINT

London, June 3. The cycle race for the London Grand Prix, on Saturday, at the Polytechnic meeting, at Hesne Hill, was won by Toni Merkens (Germany), who beat Horn in two straight races.

Racing was over 547yds. Horn got into the final by beating Roland Ulrich (France), but he failed to hold Merkens.

The first of the final heats took 2min. 30.4-sec., as Merkens and Horn "waited" for each other and both "jumped" together, but Merkens kept ahead and won by half a length. Horn took the lead in the second heat, but the German caught him in the finishing straight and won by 1½ lengths in 1min. 5.3-sec.

Horn won the five miles point-to-point race in which Merkens had a puncture in the second mile. The London Centre 10 miles motor-paced championship was won by B. Bevan (Catford C.C.), in 16min. 47.3-sec. C. Bowtie (Poly. C.C.), the holder, did not defend his title.

SHANGHAI INTERPORT TENNIS TRIALS

DUFF, BENAVIDITCH AND CARSON SHINE

GUY CHENG DISAPPOINTING

Shanghai, July 1. SOME more fine tennis was witnessed yesterday afternoon, on the Association court in further Interport trials, when W. H. Duff and M. Benavitch met Khoo Hoo-hye and Guy Cheng followed by singles between L. D. Carson and Matsunada.

The first match was easy for Duff and Benavitch, who won two straight sets by 6-1, 6-1. The singles match was not completed, owing to the strenuous game the two had been playing for over an hour, and the score was left at 6-4 in favour of Carson. 8-6 for Matsunada, and 6-6 in the last set.

Despite the fact that the doubles score was so one-sided, some excellent tennis was played by all, with the exception of Cheng, who was completely off his game. Benavitch and Duff combined brilliantly and rarely failed. Both are experts at the net and their volleying brought much applause from the spectators. Duff's height was a great advantage for smashes which he invariably made good by placing and terrific force.

ALFA ROMEOS AGAIN SWEEP BOARD.

First Three Places For French Grand Prix.

Paris, July 1.

France's greatest automobile race, for the Grand Prix, took place at Monthlery to-day, attended by 150,000 spectators.

The 500 kilometres was covered by the winner, the French driver Chiron, in an Alfa Romeo, in 3 hr. 39 min. 15 sec., a speed of 136.81 kilometres per hour.

Second was an Italian, Varzi, in an Alfa Romeo, who recorded 3 hr. 42 min. 31 sec.

Third was another Frenchman, Guy Moll, also in an Alfa Romeo, in 3 hr. 43 min. 23 sec.

There is no doubt that these two are by far the best suited couple seen in the Interport trials.

Khoo played a steady and cool game, but, as Cheng played so poorly, Khoo was at a disadvantage. A number of games in both sets went to deuce, but Duff and Benavitch always managed to gain the winning points.

The games went to 4-0 before Khoo won the one and only game on his service. In the second set the score was 5-0 before another game was won by Khoo and Cheng, but some of the best tennis was seen. The second game was entirely a lobbing affair. Duff and Benavitch making good use of this stroke and smashing right and left. The third game was one of long rallies and fine placing, with Duff and Benavitch displaying sound team work. Duff was quite up to his old standard, showing that the exhibition he gave on Saturday was purely due to his being on the sick list.

THE SINGLES

Carson put up a fine game in the singles, winning the first set at 6-4. Matsunada took the first two games, but Carson brought the score to 2-3. Matsunada levelled it again, but Carson ran away in the next two games and Matsunada only managed to win one more. Both were playing steadily from the back-line and using terrific force with rallies lasting for about five minutes.

In the second set, Carson won his service but lost the next three games. After bringing the score to 3-2, he completely lost control and threw games away until Matsunada was leading 5-2. Carson won the next three games, but he made a spectacular recovery and seemed all in. Matsunada won at 8-6 after tiring Carson out with his placings.

Carson was certainly in no condition to carry on, but play was resumed until at 6-6 the umpire decided to let the games stand. In ordinary circumstances Carson should beat Matsunada, as his tennis is of a better standard. Matsunada has excellent placing shots but his game lacks the force that Carson has. His services are weak and on a number of occasions he made double faults.—N.C.D.M.

PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL

Second Team Forming In Japan

Tokyo, June 29.

Japan's second professional baseball team will be formally organised here this summer, with Marquis Nobutsune Okuma as the first President. Several famous collegiate players, including Hisanori Karita, former Hosei University shortstop, and Osamu Mihara, a former Waseda slugger, have signed contracts with the club. The team will be named the Dai Nippon Tokyo Baseball Club. The first Japanese professional baseball team was the Nippon Athletic Association's aggregation, which was organised in 1922 and dissolved later because of lack of funds.—Rengo.

Weekly Report.

Hong Kong, July 6.
 Mr. G. A. Harriman's weekly share report and market review issued at noon yesterday.

The market again ruled quiet during the week under review with very slight interest being manifested, prices in many sections showing a slight decline. School for Boy Thieves.

Remunerative Scheme in Prague.

Prague.

Jan Koubik, aged 30, has been arrested in Prague on a charge of keeping a "school" for boy thieves in the Zizkov district of the city.

His favourite method is alleged to have been tempting errand-boys to steal from the shops where they were employed.

Every week for six months, two boys are stated to have brought to his house a sackful of goods worth about £20. They had stolen them from their firm's warehouse.

Koubik gave the boys pocket-money and promised to teach them other ways of making money easily when they were older.—Reuter.

DONATIONS REQUESTED

A Meeting of the Hong Kong Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was held in the Private Room of Messrs. Lane Crawford, Ltd. on Wednesday. Mr. J. Russell presided and there were also present Miss C. Angus, Mrs. Hayden, Mrs. Jefferies, Mrs. Loeby, Miss I. Phelps, Mrs. de Seidlecki, Mr. D. Davies, Mr. Ervine-Andrews, Mr. J. B. MacDonald, Mr. Pestonji, Mr. L. Ross, Mr. de Seidlecki, Mr. Veliki, and Mr. H. M. Cockle (Secretary).

The present outbreak of Rabies in Kowloon and the New Territories was fully discussed and it was agreed that an appeal be made to every dog owner in the Colony to co-operate to the fullest extent with the Authorities in their strenuous endeavours to prevent the further spread of this disease.

Serum inoculation is now available at the Dogs Home for owners who desire to secure this protection for their dogs, and it is hoped that the public will receive benefit from this facility.

The Society has for many years advocated the use of the Humane Killer in the Slaughter Houses of the Colony and wish to acknowledge with appreciation the action of the General Authorities in passing the recent legislation which compels the use of mechanical means in the slaughter of sheep and goats. The building of the New Dogs Home is rapidly progressing and the Society will shortly have at its command a home worthy of the cause for which it is working.

It is thought that many would avail themselves of the opportunity of contributing to a Society which is accomplishing such valuable work in the Colony and the form hereunder will provide this opportunity. It should be returned duly completed to the Secretary, Hong Kong Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Animals, a donation however small will be thankfully acknowledged and it may be sent with the confidence that it will relieve some unknown animals suffering.

PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM HOSPITAL.

Daring Attempt From G. C. H. Last Night.

ONE MAN 'CAUGHT'

Two Chinese prisoners made a dash for liberty from the Government Civil Hospital prison ward shortly before eight o'clock last night.

One man was intercepted by guards before he could make his way out of the hospital grounds, but the other got away.

The escaped prisoner was Lau Sing, 35 years of age, and was being held on a charge of returning from banishment. He was placed in the "B" block, together with other prisoners, who were being treated in the hospital.

Yeung Wai, who was recaptured, was being held on a charge of loitering in Claremont Hotel. It is understood that he was suffering from injuries to his face when he was handed over to the Police after being found in Claremont Hotel.

DEATH THROUGH DROWNING.

Inquiry On Late Mr. B. J. de Heez Moore.

A verdict of death through drowning as a result of having an epileptic fit whilst having a bath, was returned by the jury at the Coroner's inquiry held yesterday before Mr. R. J. Lee at the Kowloon Magistracy into the circumstances of the death of the late Mr. Brinsley John de Heez Moore. The deceased was found dead in his bath at the Alrio Hotel at 8.15 a.m. on June 21.

The jury added the remark that no suspicious circumstances were attached to the death.

The annual meeting of the Hong Kong Football Association will be held on Thursday next.

The girl quintuplets of Mrs. Olivia Dionne, of Callander, Ontario, pictured snugly tucked in by Nurse Mary Clouter as they continue to thrive. They are the first quintuplets born in 500 years who lived more than 50 minutes. An incubator, shipped from Chicago by aeroplane, will give the little strangers an excellent chance of surviving, physicians believe.

Science And Sea Fog Menace

Man's Cunning Cannot Eliminate Danger

CLAWS ONLY CLIPPED

(By Com. Frank Worsley, D.S.O., O.B.E., R.N.R., who has commanded 21 vessels, including Sir Ernest Shackleton's Antarctic ships, Endeavour and Quest, and five warships).

Not all the cunning and ingenuity of man, with the many scientific aids from directional radio to the submarine "leader" cable, have succeeded in robbing the sea fog-hound of his power. The best that can be said as yet is that his claws have been clipped. But there are still grave risks in the chocking, blinding pall which he casts over the surface of the water for those who follow the sea, as is evidenced by this week's disaster to the Nantucket lightship.

Fog imposes a terrific strain on navigators and appreciably slows down the commerce of the world. The treasure of the Egypt, to raise which such tremendous efforts have been made, was sent to the bottom through collision in fog. This P. & O. liner was holed and sunk 20 miles off Finisterre in May 1922, though her master had brought her to a stop and had exercised the keenest vigilance.

The collision between the Republic and the Florida, famous for being the first occasion on which wireless was instrumental in bringing aid to a sinking ship, occurred during a dense fog off Nantucket in 1909, and the terrible tragedy of the Empress of Ireland, which sank in a few moments with the loss of 1,014 lives in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, was due to a bank of fog which came down on the water, blanketing out all visibility to look-out men, and cleared away almost immediately after the ships had collided.

Getting run down is one of the big terrors of lightship crews. The Gull lightship, off Deal, was sunk in 1929, with the loss of one life out of eight, by a liner, and on one occasion on the east coast a lightship was sunk in a fog that descended for less than an hour while a relief vessel was being towed out to take up station in its place.

The Bourgoyne Disaster.

When the French liner Bourgoyne was sunk during fog in 1898 off the Newfoundland bank by a British sailing ship there perished among the 645 victims two Americans, Mr. and Mrs. Pollak. So distressed were their heirs that they offered a prize of 100,000 francs for an apparatus that would overcome the dangers of fog at sea. Twenty-two years later a French newspaper recalled this prize and mentioned that it had not been won. It has not been won even now, and navigators prophesy that it never will be won. The best that science can do is to attempt to minimize the chances of collision or grounding, and a good deal has been accomplished in this direction in recent years.

Among the many ingenious devices by which ships can keep on their course during fog one of the most promising is the "leader" cable. These cables are laid in the fairway leading into port. They are charged with an electric current, and sound instruments on the bridge of ships are actuated by this current.

Navigating officers can tell by the quality of the sound what are their positions in relation to the cable, and in this way can be led into port. This, however, has nothing to do with minimizing the dangers of collision.

Apart from the usual fog signals given by sirens or bells, there is an apparatus known as the "ear" of a ship. It is a well-known fact that sound travels with great speed (4,900 feet a second) under water, and that it can be heard for vast distances. Colladon, an early experimenter, discovered that the blows of an ordinary hammer on a handbell struck under water could be heard for eight miles, and from this discovery emerged the submarine bell, so that ships fitted with this device can make their presence heard to ships carrying receiving apparatus over great areas.

Crowded Water Danger

It is, however, when ships are in crowded waters that the greatest danger exists. A code of signals is employed, and the ears of look-out men and officers of the watch are strained to the utmost in fog to pick up the messages that bells and sirens give.

For instance, a liner sounds her siren one long blast every two minutes as she proceeds, emitting a fear-inspiring wail not particularly soothing to the nerves of those who may be in the vicinity in a fishing smack or, for that matter, to the passengers of the liner, who may have to hear this monotonous sound for hours, even days on end. On one occasion the Cunarder Andania had to sound her siren all the way from Montreal to Plymouth without cessation.

When a liner stops her engines she signifies that she has done so to other craft by giving two long blasts every two minutes with an interval of a second between blasts. If she finds that she must drop anchor, then the signal becomes the bell, which is sounded for five seconds every minutes.

There is one signal above all others that has the habit of setting seamen's nerves on edge; it consists of one long and two short blasts. It may mean that one ship is towing another; it may tell that a cable-laying vessel is in the vicinity, or it may mean something considerably more fear-inspiring, that is, the presence of a ship under way but out of control. Luckily the latter contingency is not a very frequent one.

NAVY MAKES SEA SAFER

168 New Charts Made Last Year.

SURVEY SERVICE REPORT

London.

The world-wide scope and tremendous value of the Naval Surveying Service, a branch of the Royal Navy's work of which the public hears next to nothing, is fully exemplified in the Report of the Hydrographical Department of the Navy, for 1933, which has just been issued.

Eight surveying ships were employed during the year, four working round the Coasts of Britain, one off the West Coast of Africa, and the Palestine Coast, one off the South Coast of China, the East Coast of Malaya and the West Coast of Borneo, one round Cyprus and in the Persian Gulf, and the last along the Coast of Labrador.

These eight ships, between them have surveyed 694 miles of Coast line and have sounded 3,610 and a half square miles of ocean. In addition one officer of the Royal Navy has been lent to the Australian Navy and one to the John Murray Expedition, which is carrying out scientific and oceanographic investigations in the Indian Ocean.

One hundred and sixty-eight new charts have been produced during the year, 33 existing charts improved and over 7,000 corrections made to chart plates. The enormous number of 269,996 corrections to charts were put in by hand.

In the course of the year's work 38 shoals or rocks, 25 wrecks and five obstructions were notified as either non-existent or removed, while the existence and positions of 69 wrecks and ten obstructions were notified by Admiralty Notices to Mariners.—Reuter.

You know those "occasions" when your man brings an important business friend home to dinner? The meal must be perfect, but you don't want to sit down all "hot and bothered" with the cooking! . . .

This is where the "New World" "Regulo"-controlled Gas Cooker proves its worth, for you need only set the "Regulo" oven-heat controller, place the dinner, all together, in the oven, and then leave it to cook itself, unattended, until you are ready to serve it.

Doesn't this sound marvellous? . . . But thousands of women enjoy a new leisure by using this wonderful Cooker.

"A Gaping Chasm."

The London Press correspondent who declared that the very first stages of the re-opened Disarmament Conference had revealed "a gaping chasm" between Britain and France, expressed a truth not at all unexpected. Sir John Simon himself had already invited exactly that figure of speech when he spoke of the British Government's efforts to act as a bridge-builder. Assuredly, Britain has striven mightily to prevent the revival of militarism and to reconcile old hostilities. Her patient proposals are by this time as lengthy as the numerous "last appearances" of veteran actors and singers. No one can pretend that she has succeeded. But at least she might have hoped to avoid that fate of offending both sides which cynics assign to the peacemaker. As things are, she would appear to have earned suspicion from many and gratitude from few or none. Sir John Simon's speech, which carried with it that note of final appeal to which we are now accustomed in British pleadings, was a mixture, perhaps not an unnatural one, of aspirations cherished and realities recognised. The outstanding points of past discussions to which he in detail referred were interesting enough to the academic mind, but had, after all, little bearing on a situation which to-day has changed so markedly and so plainly for the worse. The Foreign Minister himself was conscious of this when he remarked that vague and inconclusive talk was calculated only to injure the cause of peace and damage the prestige of the League of Nations. His claim that the British memorandum of January last approximated closely to the German declaration, which showed that differences were being narrowed, probably helped more than a little to bring M. Barthou to his feet in pugnacious mood. The middle path between French and German wishes is hard for Britain, or any other mediator, to find.

France's case is not difficult to understand; and whether or not it commands entirely the assent of the head, it has more than a trifling claim to the sympathy of the heart. Putting it in a nutshell, if Germany cannot be prevented from rearming (which probably could only be done by a preventive war, a thing scarcely to be undertaken by the wildest chauvinist), then France demands such sanctions as may seem to promise her security. She contends that she consented to the stopping of the war at a moment when vastly more decisive results seemed imminent, on the plain understanding that security was to be given—an understanding never realised. Since then, all France's activities, alliances abroad and defence measures at home, have been directed to the one great object, not of aggression, but of natural self-protection. She finds herself to-day, after the immense losses and sacrifices of the recent past, vulnerable at many points in face of an unfriendly Power with latent strength probably greater than her own. Have we the right, remembering these things, to regard the outburst of M. Barthou as hysterical? There are sober judges who are firmly convinced that Britain's own realisation of danger is not nearly vivid enough, in view of her comparative weakness at sea and still more in the air. London, in the eyes of many more than the experts alone, is not among those places whose geographical immunity M. Barthou appeared to envy. He and other European observers are at times inclined to think that a nation which views its own perils with such calmness is likely to be more than negligent of perils which may strike it indirectly through others.

Germany's withdrawal has again been deplored by the spokesman of Great Britain. Others, in effect, denounce it as a means of disowning all obligations and restrictions—as witness the great increase in Germany's military expenditure. Further, what of Japan, what of the United States? It is the barest truth that more than one of the most potentially dangerous nations no longer owe even nominal allegiance to either League or Conference. That in itself helps to increase the sense of insecurity, in addition to the open lack of mutual trust among some of those who are still in membership. Which of them now finds any visible comfort in the Locarno pact? Nevertheless, Sir John Simon professes still to look to limited guarantees of that sort rather than to a scheme of world-wide assurance. Yet, seeing that it was precisely for the realisation of such objects as the latter that the League of Nations was originally formed, Sir John's resigned acceptance of a second-best looks somewhat like a counsel of despair. It is true, as he recalled, that Denmark, Spain, Norway, and Sweden have in recent days formally stated their approval of Britain's attitude and proposals. All of these countries were neutral during the war, and may, therefore, be considered as capable of taking a detached and impartial view. Yet one cannot overlook the fact that all of them together do not, unfortunately, count for very much in a world which in-

FEEDING THE EMPIRE

Dr. John Boyd Orr, who recently delivered the Chadwick Lecture at the Royal United Service Institution, is the Empire's greatest authority on animal nutrition.

A Scot by birth and speech, he had a brilliant career in medicine in Glasgow. He abandoned it in 1914 to devote himself to nutrition research and founded the Rowett Institute in Aberdeen.

To-day he is the Head of the Imperial Bureau for the exchange of information on everything to do with men's food throughout the Empire.

Dr. Orr is a plain-speaking man. In his lecture he had some incontrovertible facts to announce.

The most striking was his statement that, while only 7 per cent. of the population of Britain was engaged in agriculture, the figure would need to be raised to only 14 per cent. to supply the nation's entire needs.

MILK MUDDLE

Dr. Orr made some trenchant remarks about the milk situation.

Milk, he said, was in the same position as water a hundred years ago. The provision of an abundant pure supply at a price that would bring it within the reach of the poorest people was now our most urgent social reform.

The average amount of milk consumed in Britain each day was not more than half-a-pint.

A pint was necessary for health, especially for children and mothers of families.

Yet milk to-day is being sold for other purposes at much cheaper rates than it is available to the public.

His conclusion was that some better scheme than the present one must be evolved for the supply and distribution of milk.

Your Daily Smile!

Quite!

"There is nothing that causes so much misery as the winning and losing of money at cards," states a cleric. I agree as regards the losing.

Drenching

"There is rain high above waiting to fall even on the most brilliant sunny day," remarks a meteorologist. Anybody who has started to sun-bathe knows that.

New Idea

In one London restaurant, as an experiment, soup was served in cube-form. The silence was said to be positively uncanny.

He Is Supreme

An inventor has produced a cloth-cutting machine which is "the fastest and most efficient thing of its kind." He hasn't seen my Uncle George playing billiards.

Looks That Way

An American claims to have discovered a new moon. Perhaps prohibition was best, after all.

As It Strikes Me

"You won't see any dangerous tactics in this year's Test matches," says a writer. Then they will be safety-matches!

Facts You Did Not Know

The Peruvian Congress is considering the establishment of a petroleum monopoly, including a nationally owned refinery.

A new holder for cradle telephones can be used either horizontally on a desk or vertically to hang a telephone on a wall.

Applications for patents in Germany last year totalled 72,680, the number showing a decrease for the first time in five years.

Weighing only 16 pounds, a full sized bed with springs has been invented that can be folded and carried under an automobile seat.

ists on thinking in terms less of right than of might. The despondency of the usually optimistic Mr. Henderson is hardly surprising.

THE MEN WHO OWN LONDON

L.C.C. POSSESSES THE LARGEST SLICE
OLD ESTATES DWINDLING

(By A. P. Lascombe Whyte.)

It is customary, in the hurry of everyday conversation, to talk about the land and houses of Central—and even worse, Greater—London, as if they were a comprehensible unit governed by the same laws; a generalisation which is palpably untrue.

On the rebound, it is almost as customary to imagine that Central London is owned by a few rich and worthless noblemen—an equally false assumption.

Actually, for a better grasp of the many problems which a Socialism L.C.C. is likely to lay before us in the next three years, it is desirable to know who does own London.

Out of eight million inhabitants only 40,000 own any of London's land, and of these thousands only about a score possess really large slices of the city.

The L.C.C. is the most important landlord, with a fault-finding eye on 280,000 tenants, despatching rent bills for £1,600,000 odd every year and groaning at a capital expenditure of over £42 million. A large part of the rest of London is in the hands of a few great ground landlords.

The most valuable property is undoubtedly that of the Duke of Westminster, who, a few years ago, was described as "owning most of the West End" as well as large tracts round Vauxhall Bridge-road and Millbank. The estate then occupied approximately three-quarters of a square mile of London's most valuable space, valued at £20 million. Of late some of this has been sold, and in 1930 eight acres of ground on the Millbank estate changed hands for about a million. To-day big new offices stand on the site.

But the Duke of Westminster still owns hundreds of acres of fabulously valuable land in Mayfair and Belgravia, including land Park-lane, Grosvenor-square, Berkeley-street and all that world. Not many landlords find that all their friends are their tenants.

When Park-lane was rebuilt the Duke's permission had to be sought. Which is fair enough. The boarder who wants his bedroom repapered consults the landlord.

The foundation of his old estate was laid in Elizabethan times, when the head of the Grosvenor family married a Miss Davies, who owned a pleasant little property, in what is now Belgravia, known as Ebury Farm.

It cannot have been a very great or rich farm, for it was valued at four shillings a year. And for long it developed slowly. Even 100 years ago the farm had only progressed into the district known as Five Fields, neither the value nor reputation of which was considered high.

To-day the ghost of forgotten Ebury Farm spreads its shadowy pasture land over the cream of residential London; of Belgrave, Eaton and Chester squares, Eaton-place, Wilton-crescent, Ebury-street and a score of other streets between Buckingham Palace and Chelsea.

Many of the original leases in these districts fell in recently and were renewed on favourable terms. So enormously has value risen that the rent-roll from Eaton-square alone is believed to have been quadrupled. It is undoubtedly enough to have paid the wages bill of Ebury Farm for all infinity. To-morrow it may be enough to have bought every farm in Elizabethan England.

The Duke is a generous and kindly landlord. When the swollen Thames burst its banks in 1929, and swept a whole district, the Duke replaced the ruined furniture of thousands of his Millbank tenants. He later presented land worth £200,000 and over £115,000 in cash for rehousing 2500 people.

Portman Estates

The Portman family has been called London's second ground landlord. Large parts of the estate have been sold (after the fashion of most big London estates), but in 1929 the late Lord Portman was said to hold over 270 acres of valuable West End land.

Originally the family were landlords of a great area stretching north from Oxford-street up to Maylebone-road, and including Portman, Bryanston and Montagu squares, and at the time of his death close friends of the late Lord Portman considered his estate worth half a million.

They had forgotten that land is a fickle and a costly servant. Lord Portman left £1685 net personally and an unsettled estate worth £62,347.

Like the Grosvenor and other estates, the Portman lands were founded on a farm. The kind thought of an early ancestor of Lord Portman started the family fortunes. Over 170 years ago a member of the family was ill. The family doctor prescribed asses' milk as an essential diet. It was not a common commodity. So the head of the family bought for £2000 a farm and fields on which to keep a drove of asses. On these fields have arisen the great squares of to-day.

Those of us who live in Chelsea have reason to be grateful to the father of the late Earl of Cadogan, who transformed a huddle of small streets and houses into one of the main residential areas of London and a soft home for moneyed Bohemia.

He also transformed the rents.

£3,000,000 Deal

Recently the late Sir John Ellerman bought 13 acres of the Cadogan estate, but even in 1933 it was estimated to cover 116 acres of expensive streets and houses between Knightsbridge and Royal Hospital-road. Cadogan and Sloane squares, Cadogan and Hans places, Sloane and Lower Sloane streets, Sloane-gardens and Sloane-court, parts of Cheyne-walk and King's-road, and streets leading off King's-road all belong to it.

Although the estate was, nominally, one of London's greatest, again possession did not bring wealth. The Earl was made bankrupt in 1911, and the lands long administered by trustees.

But his name lives on in streets, inns and houses.

Lord Howard de Walden has also been dubbed "London's richest landlord, with an income of £400,000 a year (paying for his horse Blazony's feed). Up till 1925 he owned 40 acres of the heart of London, stretching from Oxford-street to Euston-road, and from Oxford-circus and Regent-street eastward to Wells-street. He sold at a good time to a trust largely owned by Sir John Ellerman at a price said to be £3 million.

KNIGHT IN ARMOUR
IN PLANE

Strange Sight On Reich
Air Route.

ACTOR SOLVES MYSTERY

Munich. Passengers waiting in an airliner at Munich to start for Berlin were astonished to see a figure in mediaeval armour board the machine and take his seat.

No one could see his face, as he kept the visor closed.

Throughout the journey he sat without speaking a word, and at Berlin got off the aeroplane and disappeared.

Herr Heinrich George, a well-known German actor, has just revealed the secret behind this incident.

He had been taking the part of a knight in a play which had finished its run at Munich, and was on his way to Berlin to open in the same part there.

When he arrived at the aerodrome he found that he had not enough money to pay the freight on his luggage. As he had to have the armour in Berlin that evening he unpacked it and wore it during the flight.—Reuter.

BETTER STRENGTH
ON WALL STREET*Business Continues
To Rule Dull.*SILVER MARKET QUIET

New York, To-day.
Industrials rails and utilities improved .88, .25 and .30 to 97.32, 43.55 and 23.86, respectively, on the New York market yesterday. Bonds, however, declined .04 to 94.54, while the commodity index was down .54 to 56.13.

Business ruled dull, only 460,000 shares being traded.
S. E. Levy and Company's Report. In their market report, Messrs. S. E. Levy and Company, correspondents for Messrs. White, Weld and Company, New York, state: "Stocks:—Once again, we repeat our view of the market is that purchases should be made on moderate recessions. Business done: 460,000 shares.

"Bonds:—High-grade bonds are firmer to-day, while second-grade issues have improved throughout. "Cotton:—The market was lower on easier Liverpool cables and reports of rain in the West. The market was dull throughout. "Silver:—The market ruled quiet.

"Rubber:—Prices were easier to-day on profit-taking. We continue to recommend purchases.

"Wheat:—The market is quiet but steady. We repeat our opinion given yesterday that purchases are advisable on the scale-down. Thursday's sales: 11,136,000 bushels.

"The National City Bank has declared a dividend on Common stock of 33-1/3 Cents due on July 7 and to be paid on August 1. Covering on a four months' basis is unchanged. A dividend has also been declared on Preferred stock of fifty cents, falling due on the same dates.

"The Chase National Bank has declared a dividend on Common stock of 47 Cents, due on July 14 and to be paid on August 1. Also a dividend on Preferred stock of 37-1/2 cents, falling due on the same dates."—Reuter.

E. A. Pierce Co.'s Report. In their market report, the American Oriental Finance Corporation, correspondents for Messrs. E. A. Pierce and Company, New York, state:

"Stocks:—The movement of the list is encouraging but the continued lack of volume testifies to the absence of outside confidence. In the street one hears stories of quite investment absorption. Business done: 460,000 shares.

"Wheat:—Early in the day the market was easier on cables reporting rains. There was a moderate amount of hedging which was absorbed and, later in the day, prices were firmer in sympathy with the Winnipeg market which was supported. Wednesday's sales: 11,136,000 bushels.

"Cotton:—Liquidation was a little more general to-day, induced mainly by some showers in Texas and Oklahoma. Selling found a more limited off-take than recently, due to the falling off of speculative and Trade demand. Price fixing occurred at the lower levels.

"Silver:—Silver futures opened easy following the lower trend of the London market and they continued to decline on Wheat. A few orders came into the market but a waiting policy was being followed.

"Car-loading for the week ended June 30 amounted to 644,872, an increase of 22,700 over the previous week."

Night Telegram. The following telegram was received during the night service from New York:—

"There is no evidence of profit-taking as the Stocks' market opened firm."

"In the silver market, speculative liquidation was taken up by the Banks at their own prices. Buying interest is concentrated in one source who makes the market. "In the Cotton market, most of the selling came from Southern 'longs.' Some rains are reported in Oklahoma and Texas."—Reuter.

A freak canary has been born at Butterworth, near here.

Mr. H. Temlett mated a black-head cock with an English canary hen, the result being a "mule" hen. He then mated this "mule" hen with an English canary male bird, and while most of the eggs were unfertile, one young bird with white feathers and a pure black head was hatched.

The result of Mr. Temlett's extraordinary experiment has aroused great interest among bird fanciers.—Reuter.

Great anxiety has been caused by the disappearance of a six-milligram radium needle from the stall occupied at the Rand Show by the National Cancer Association of South Africa.

When the loss of the needle was discovered an intensive search followed, but no trace of it could be found. The value of the needle is about £12. It was kept in a holder when not used for demonstrating radium treatment and it disappeared from its holder. It is feared that the person who removed the needle does not realise how dangerous it is.—Reuter.

Hong Kong was represented in the group of more than 4,000 students who graduated from New York University on June 13 at the 102nd Commencement Exercises at Ohio Field, University Heights, New York.

The local graduate was Mr. Chen Kae-kung of No. 121 Wellington St., Jurist Doctor in Law School.

The exercises featured the installation of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase as eighth Chancellor of the University. Dr. Chase, for 10 years president of the University of North Carolina and for three years head of the University of Illinois, last July succeeded Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Chancellor Emeritus of New York University, who also took part in the installation ceremonies.

Following his installation Dr. Chase delivered an inaugural address in the form of a commencement address, conferred degrees upon approximately 4,100 graduates and invested six nationally prominent persons with honorary degrees. The honorary degree recipients included the Presidents of Yale, Harvard and Princeton Universities.

FILM STAR HONOURED.
Mr. Lawrence Tibbett, the celebrated singer and film star, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Music and the following were invested with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws:

Thomas William Lamont, banker; James Rowland Angell, President of Yale University; James Bryant Conant, President of Harvard University; Harold Willis Dodds, President of Princeton University, and Dr. Brown, Chancellor Emeritus of New York University.

Fifteen thousand friends and relatives of the graduates were present on Ohio Field, which was appropriately decorated in violet and white, the University colours, for the ceremonies.

Berlin.
A party of children found a box floating down the river at Wuerzburg on Main.

They opened it and discovered a snake, nearly four feet long, peacefully sleeping on a heap of banana stems.

Hastily clapping on the lid as the creature began to move, the children took their find to the zoological authorities, who declared it to be venomous.

It is supposed that the reptile was imported in a shipment of bananas and placed in the box to get rid of it.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story.White
Stockings*By Edgar Wallace.

JOHN TREVOR was not a jealous man. He told himself this a dozen times. He told Marjorie Banning only once.

"Jealous," she flamed, and then, gaining control of her anger, "I don't quite understand you."

"Jealous, of course, is a silly word to use, but," he blundered, "what I mean is suspicious."

They were sitting in the park under an expansive elm.

"What I mean to say is," said Jack, desperately, "I trust you, dear, and—well, I don't want to know your secrets, but—"

"But?" she repeated coldly.

"Well, I merely remark that I have seen you three times driving in a swaggy motor-car."

"A client's car," she said, quietly.

"But surely the dressing of people's hair does not occupy all the afternoon and evening," he persisted.

"Really, I'm awfully sorry if I'm bothering you, but it is a fact that whenever I've seen you it has been on the days when you have told me you could not come to me in the evening."

He was making it very hard for her, and she resented—bitterly resented—not only his doubt and the knowledge that in his eyes her movements were suspicious, but that she could offer no explanation.

"Who has been putting these ideas in your head?" she asked.

"Lennox Mayne?"

"Lennox!" he snorted. "How ridiculous you are, Marjorie. Lennox would not dream of saying anything against you, to me or anybody else. Lennox is very fond of you. Why, Lennox introduced me to you."

She bit her lips thoughtfully. She had excellent reasons for knowing that Lennox was very fond of her—fond in the way that Lennox had been of so many chance-met shopgirls.

Belgrade.
It was after dawn when Mihailo Glishitch reached home at Jagodina, following a night of conviviality. He blinked.

The garden was just as he had left it—but the house was gone. Mihailo felt the situation was too much for him, so he went to sleep in the orchard.

During his evening's revelry Mihailo had—in defiance of a regulation forbidding peasants to sell land or houses—sold his house to a friend for 32s.

The friend immediately had the house dismantled and the timber and bricks removed, as he wanted to use them to build himself a home.—Reuter.

POLICE DUPED BY DOPE GANG*Unwittingly Act As Agents.*SEIZED MORPHINE SOLD

Belgrade.
The police at Novi Sad, in Yugoslavia, have just discovered how they unwittingly acted as agents for the distribution of a dangerous drug.

Two years ago they seized a quantity of "patent medicine" in the possession of a local merchant because he had no license to trade.

The goods were sold by auction and bought cheaply by a Swiss dealer.

Recent disclosures in Switzerland show that this man was a wholesale dealer in forbidden drugs, which he distributed throughout Europe.

What the Novi Sad police had sold to him was nothing less than morphine. He himself had supplied it to the merchant in the first place.

Now that their eyes have been opened, the Yugoslav police have unmasked a nation-wide organization for the sale of dangerous drugs in the guise of patent medicine.—Reuter.

She was employed at a great West End hairdresser's, and hated the work; indeed, hated the work more than the necessity for working. Her father, a small provincial doctor, had died a few years before, leaving her and her mother penniless. A friend of the family had known the proprietor of Fennetts, and old Fennetts was in need of a secretary. She had come to what Lennox Mayne crudely described as the "woman's barbers" in that capacity. From secretary she had passed to a more practical side of the business, for the old man, a master of his craft, had initiated her into the mysteries of "colour culture."

"I'm awfully sorry that I've annoyed you," she said, primly, as she got up, "but we shopgirls have our duties, Jack."

MONDAY'S STORY

Monday's story will be
"Between Eight and Eight,"
by C. S. Forester.

"For heaven's sake don't call yourself a shopgirl," he snapped. "Of course, dear, I quite accept your explanation—only, why make a mystery of it?"

Suddenly she slipped her arm in his.

"Because I am paid to make a mystery of it," she said with a smile. "Now take me to 'Frangina's' for I'm starving."

Over the meal they returned to the subject of Lennox.

"I know you don't like him," said Jack. "He really is a good fellow, and, what is more, he is very useful to me, and I cannot afford to lose useful friends. We were at Rugby together, but, of course, he was always a smarter chap than I. He has made a fortune while I am struggling to get together the necessary thousand that will enable me to introduce you to that home—"

"You're a darling," she said, "but I hope you will never make your money as Lennox has made his. We hear queer stories, we dyers of ladies' faded locks, and Lennox is well known in London as a man who lives by his wits."

"But his uncle—" he began.

"His uncle is very rich, but hates Lennox. Everybody says so."

"That is where you're wrong," said Jack, triumphantly. "They have been bad friends, but now they are reconciled. I was dining with Lennox last night, and he told me that the old man was most friendly now. And, what is more, he lowered his voice confidentially, 'he is putting me in the way of making a fortune.'"

"Lennox?" said the girl, incredulously.

She and Lennox Mayne had met at the house of a mutual friend, and then they had met again in the park, as she and Jack were meeting, and Lennox had discovered a future for her which had certain material advantages and definite spiritual drawbacks. And then one Sunday, when he had taken her on the river, they had met Jack Trevor, and she had found it increasingly easy to hold at bay the philanthropist.

They strolled back to the park as the dusk was falling, and, entering the Marble Arch gate, they passed an untidy, horsey little man who touched his hat to Jack and grinned broadly.

"That is Willie Jeans," said Jack, with a smile. "His father was our groom in the old Royston days. I wonder what he is doing in London?"

"What is he?" she asked, curiously.

"He is a tout—a man who watches race-horses. Willie is a very clever watcher."

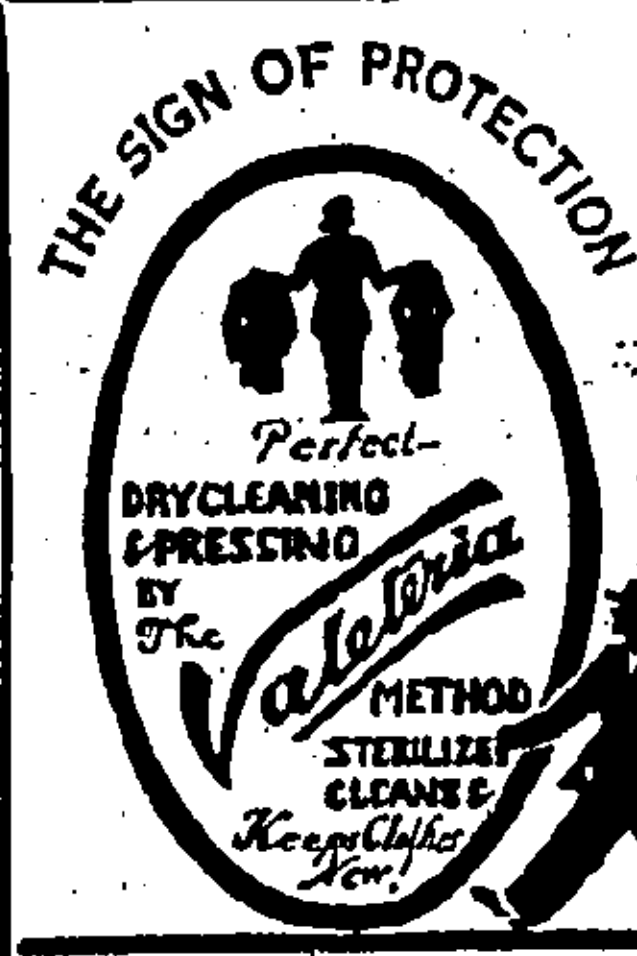

"How queer!" she said, and laughed.

The man who sprawled motionless along the top of the wall had certain strange chameleon-like characteristics. His mottled green coat and his dingy, yellow breeches and gaiters so completely harmonized with the ancient wall and its over-hanging trees that nine passers-by out of ten would have failed to notice him. Happily for his peace of mind, there were no passers-by, the hour being seven o'clock on a sunny May morning.

Cheese grated into the afternoon tea biscuits makes them delicious.

Soda Makes Chicken Tender.

If the butcher sends you a chicken which you fear may be less tender than you had hoped, a pinch of soda in the cooking water will help make it tender.

FOR CONVENIENCE

If you're serving some sort of creamed meat or fish on toast, cut the toast in little strips instead of in halves. Your guests will have less trouble cutting it, and the servings will be more decorative.

Tasty "Turkey Legs" Offers Welcome Change.

A SUGGESTED MENU

A new cut of meat, a new way of cooking an old favourite or a new accompaniment for the meat are economical means of adding variety and interest to the family dinner.

Instead of a dinner of veal steak and gravy and mashed potatoes, stewed tomatoes, salad and cake and canned fruit for dessert, try turkey legs, twice baked potatoes, broccoli with cheese, stuffed apple salad, chocolate roll, coffee.

The "turkey legs" will be given enthusiastic applause but they will cost no more than the ordinary veal steak served in the usual manner.

Turkey Legs

One pound lean veal, 1 egg, sifted dried bread crumbs, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, few gratings nutmeg.

Cut veal in strips two inches wide and twist around wooden skewers. Your butcher will supply the skewers. Mix salt, pepper and nutmeg and season each "leg." Roll in crumbs, dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon water and roll again in crumbs. Brown quickly on all sides in hot fat in a frying pan. Place in a baking dish, add milk and bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

Bake the potatoes while the meat is cooking and finish the broccoli dish with this same heat. Veal is such a delicious meat that it deserves a wider use than it enjoys.

Pork chops are another standby that can be varied in innumerable ways. Pork chops and potatoes en casserole is a splendid one-piece dish that depends on the seasonings for its unusual flavour.

Pork Chops and Potatoes

Four nice pork chops, 4 good-sized potatoes, 2 medium-size onions, 1 cup diced celery, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1-3 teaspoon mustard, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1 cup water, coarse bread crumbs, 1 slice fat salt pork.

Trim fat from chops. Cut salt pork in cubes and sprinkle in bottom of baking dish cover with a layer of thinly sliced onion and diced celery.

Cover with a layer of pork chops. Mix and sift flour, salt, pepper and sprinkle half of it over the chops. Repeat the layers, making the last one of pork chops.

Cover with crumbs and dot with bits of the fat trimmed from the chops. Pour in milk and water at one side of the dish. Cover and bake two hours in a moderate oven. Remove cover for the last fifteen minutes of baking to brown the crumbs on top. Serve from baking dish.

Serve this dish with a salad of crisp, mixed greens if they are available. If not use shredded leaf lettuce and shredded cabbage tossed together with a lemon dressing. Deep dish apple pie, apple dumplings to be eaten with sugar and cream or plain apple sauce and ginger bread would make a delicious dessert.

CELERY SANDWICHES

Small pieces of celery rolled up in bread make tasty sandwiches.

RULES WHEN YOU COOK VEGETABLES

What Timetables Do Not Specify

MANY FACTORS COUNT

Time tables for roasting and baking and brewing and stewing have been worked out in kitchen laboratories which the beginner in cooking will find invaluable, but there are factors to be considered in the cooking of meats and vegetables that timetables cannot specify. For instance the varying maturity, time from the garden and size of materials.

To begin with generalisations. All young, freshly gathered vegetables will cook in less time than older ones. Vegetables which have wilted will take longer to cook than unwilted ones.

Small vegetables or large ones cut in small pieces will cook more quickly than those left whole. The more surface exposed, the shorter cooking period.

Cooking Green Peas

Then the time required for preparing vegetables for cooking be considered in the planning of the whole meal. For example, green peas should cook in 20 minutes.

But if they must be shelled they are not a good vegetable to choose when dinner must be served in 30 minutes because it takes time to shell peas, longer than preparing beans or potatoes.

Aside from this, if they are not fresh from the garden and perfectly young and tender, they won't be done in 20 minutes, but will take 30.

Asparagus cooks in 30 minutes and is quickly prepared. Green beans, this means either the green or yellow bean, should cook in 30 minutes—if they are fresh and young and cut in diamonds. If beans break with a snap you may be pretty certain they are fresh and tender. Older beans should have their edges cut in short lengths because as the beans mature the "strings" are sure to toughen and require a long time to cook.

Remember to cook all green vegetables UNCOVERED. Start them cooking in boiling water and serve just as soon as tender. Prolonged cooking not only causes loss of colour but makes the vegetable unappetisingly soft and tasteless.

Preparing New Carrots

New carrots, cut in slices, cook tender in 15 minutes. Diced they will take longer. Since they are lightly scraped, they are quickly prepared and only a few minutes need be allowed for their preparation.

New beets require only a thorough scrubbing before cooking and as they should cook in 30 to 40 minutes, they are an excellent vegetable to use when an hour is allowed for the preparation of the meal.

Potatoes vary according to the method of cooking. Baked potatoes need an hour in an oven which registers 400 degrees F. Baked potatoes usually need from thirty to 45 minutes, depending on the size. Cut in half lengthwise they will cook tender in boiling water in 30 minutes.

Train yourself to cook green and succulent vegetables in as little water as possible.

BISCUIT DOUGH FOR SHORTCAKE.

Berries Add Flavour.

Two layers of biscuit dough, rolled out very thin, make the best shortcake. Use more butter than usual in the making, and be sure the dough is very thinly spread in separate tins.

After the dough is cooked, spread each layer with butter to increase its richness. Then place the berries on the lower layer, put the second layer on top and add more berries.

CORN CHOWDER

¼ cups diced bacon.
3 tablespoons chopped celery
3 tablespoons chopped celery
2 cups corn
1 cup diced raw potato
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups water
3 cups milk
3 tablespoons butter

Cut bacon into small pieces. Heat in frying pan and when very hot add and brown celery and onions. Add corn, potato, water. Cover and cook 20 minutes or until potatoes.

FOODS YOU NEED

Do you need vitamins? Then eat eggs, leafy vegetables, raw fruits, and drink plenty of milk.

Do you want proteins? They're in milk, too, and in meat, vegetables, fish, nuts, cheese.

Do you want fats? They're in butter, cream, oils, bacon.

And, of course, if you need starchy foods—or if you shouldn't have them—you'll be able to accept or reject macaroni, potatoes, rice, syrups.

SAVING PARAFFIN

Save the paraffin from the tops of jelly glasses. Wash the paraffin, dry it, and it's all ready for use again.

GERANIUM LEAF FLAVOUR

A piece of sweet geranium leaf placed in grape jelly while it is cooking adds flavour.

WHITE STOCKINGS

"I'm talking about the dark Yamen," said Lennox, "my uncle's horse. I told you the other day that I would make your fortune; I am going to do it."

He got up, went to a table, and took up the morning paper, turning its pages.

"Here is the betting," he said, "100 to 6 Yamen; and Yamen is as certain to win the Derby as you are to marry your nice little girl. I can get you ten thousand to six hundred to-day; to-morrow the price may be shorter."

"Good lord, I couldn't lose six hundred pounds!" gasped Jack. "If you knew how small a risk it was you wouldn't yammer like a sheep."

"Suppose I had sixty pounds on it?"

"Sixty pounds," sneered the other. "My dear chap, what is the use of making money in pennies? Here is the chance of your lifetime, and unless you are a lunatic you will not miss it."

To-morrow the horse will be nearer six to one than sixteen, and you can lay out your money and stand to win a fortune at practically no risk to yourself."

He spoke for half an hour on horses—of Yamen, its speed, its breeding—and Jack listened, fascinated. "I'll ring up a bookmaker and put it on for you."

"Wait, wait," said Jack, hoarsely, as the other reached for the telephone. "It is a fearful lot of money to risk, Lennox."

"And a fearful lot of money to win," said the tempter. "If he had had more time he would have arranged the bet so that the six hundred pounds fell into his pocket, but that was impossible. Jack Trevor must be caught immediately or not at all—must be given no time to reflect or to seek advice, and certainly no time to discover that Yamen was a cripple. The secret might leak out at any moment. The loss of six hundred might prevent a contemptuous little hair-dressing girl from marrying; it would certainly postpone the event."

"I'll do it," said Jack, with a gasp, and listened as in a dream to his placid companion's voice.

"Put it to the account of Mr. John Trevor, Castlemaine-gardens. Yes, I'll be responsible. Thank you."

He hung up the receiver and looked round at the other with a queer smile.

"I congratulate you," he said softly, and Jack went back to the city, his head in a whirl.

Marjorie Banning heard the news and dropped into a two-penny park chair.

"You've put all the money on a horse!" she said hollowly. "Oh, Jack!"

"But, my dear," said Jack stoutly, "the money is as good as mine, and all that Lennox said is true. The horse was sixteen to one yesterday, and it is only eight to one to-day."

"It is all right. Marjorie," he added, with poorly stimulated cheerfulness, "the horse belongs to Lennox Mayne's uncle. He told Lennox that it is certain to win. Think what ten thousand pounds means, Marjorie dear."

She listened unconvinced. She who knew with what labour and sacrifice his little nest-egg had been gathered, who understood even more clearly than he what its loss would entail, could only sit with a blank sense of despair at her heart.

At that moment Mr. Lennox Mayne was experiencing something of her dismay, though the cause was a little different. Summoned by telegram, he who had been described as the "Prince of Touts" and come post haste to Manchester-square, and whilst the grimy Ford, with its stout, heliolic driver stood at the door, Mr. Wilfred Jeans sidged up uneasily and endured with such patience as he could command the flow of his employer's abuse.

"You're a blundering jackass, and I was a fool to hire you," stormed Lennox Mayne. "What is the use of touting a horse if you're seen touting? I told you that you were not to let anybody know that you were connected with me, you drivelling fool, and you've been talking."

"You've been talking. Listen to this!" Lennox snatched up a letter from the table.

"This is from my uncle. Listen to this, you damned fool!"

"You are not satisfied with my information, it seems, but employ your tout to spy on my trainings. You can tell Mr. Wilfred Jeans from me that if ever he is again seen in, or near my estate he will get the biggest flogging he has ever had in his life."

"I never knew anybody saw me. There was nobody about when I was on the wall," grumbled Mr. Jeans. "I've earned my fifty if ever a man has earned it."

"You'll get no fifty from me," said Lennox. "I've given you as much money as you're entitled to, and don't come near me again."

When Mr. Wilfred Jeans joined his brother he was in no amiable frame of mind.

"Where are we going now?" asked that placid man.

Willie suggested a place which has the earliest and most varied of routes, and his brother, who was not unused to these temperamental outbursts, held on his way for their original destination had been to Epsom. A policeman at Hyde Park raised a warning hand at the sight of the man in the machine, but Mr. Wilfred Jeans's driver was a "private car" within the meaning of the act, and they joined the rapid procession of machines that were moving slowly through the park.

It was late that made the oil lubrication clock within a dozen paces of where two disconsolate lovers were sitting.

"What a queer car," said the girl, "and isn't that the man you saw the other day—the tout, did you call him?"

"Yes," said Jack, gloomily, "that's the tout," and then suddenly, "I wonder if he knows."

He rose and walked across to the man, and Willie touched his cap.

"Good evening, Mr. Trevor."

"Where are you going?" asked Jack. "I'm going to Epsom to watch the Derby gallops. Most of the horses are there now, but," he grinned unpleasantly, "not Yamen!"

"Why isn't he there?" asked Jack, with a sickening heart.

"Because he'll never see a race-course, that's why," said the other, savagely.

"What do you mean?" asked Jack. "He is lame," said the little man. "I hope you haven't backed him?"

Jack nodded.

"Come here," he said. "This is pretty bad news I've heard, Marjorie," he said. "Jeans says that Yamen is lame."

"That's right," nodded the tout. "As lame as old Junket. That is another one of Mr. Greyman's."

"I don't know much about horses," said Jack. "I want you to tell me about Yamen. How long has it been lame?"

"Three days," said the little man. "I have been touting it for a week. It broke down in the winding-up gallop."

"Does Mr. Greyman know?"

Mr. Greyman said the little man, "Why of course he knows. He didn't let on to Lennox Mayne, but I told Lennox Mayne, and fat a lot of thanks I got for it."

"When did you tell him?" asked Jack, going white.

"The day before yesterday."

"Then Lennox Mayne knew!" Jack was bewildered.

"It can't be true," he said. "Lennox would never—"

"Lennox Mayne would give away his own aunt," said Willie Jeans, contemptuously.

"Was it Lennox Mayne who persuaded you to back this horse?" asked the girl.

Jack nodded.

"You are sure Yamen is lame?"

"I swear to it. I know the back of my hand," said the little man, emphatically. "The only horse with four white stockings in the Baldoock stable."

"Baldoock!" The girl was on her feet, staring. "Baldoock, did you say?"

"That's right, Miss."

"Who lives there?" she asked, quickly.

"Greyman."

"What sort of a man is he?"

"He is an old man about sixty, grey-haired and as hard as a nail."

She was silent a long time after the little man had gone on his shaky way and then, most unexpectedly, she asked:

"Will you take me to see the Derby, Jack?"

"Good lord, I didn't expect you'd be interested," he said.

"Will you take me? You can hire a car for the day, and we could see the race from the roof. Will you take me?"

He nodded, too dumbfounded to speak. She had never before evinced the slightest interest in a horse-race.

Some rumour of the dark Yamen's infirmity must have crept out, for on the morning of the race the horse was quoted amongst the twenty-five to one brigade, and hints of a mishap appeared in the morning Press.

Marjorie had never been to a race meeting before, and possibly even the more sodate meetings would have astonished her, but Epsom was a revelation.

"There are all sorts of rumours about," said Jack, returning from his tour of discovery. "They say that Yamen doesn't run. The papers prepared us for that. I am horribly afraid, dear, I've been a fool."

She bent down as she stood on the roof of the car and took his hand, and to his amazement he discovered she had left a paper in it.

"What's this a bank note? Are you going to have a bet?"

She nodded.

"I want you to make a bet for me," she said.

"What are you backing?"

"Yamen," she replied.

Threatened in Cuba

Following on the heels of the recent attack on Jefferson Caffery, American Ambassador to Cuba, threats to Freeman Matthews, First Secretary of the American Embassy in Havana, giving him two weeks to leave Cuba, brought the statement from President Carlos Menéndez that the government is determined to take drastic action on terrorists.

VODKA, FISH AND PICKLES

Strange Menu On Soviet Steamer.

NO DRINKING WATER

Moscow.
A strange story, of how 100 people had to live on vodka, pickles and fish for two weeks is told in the Soviet press.

The 100 boarded a Volga excursion steamer plying from Rybinsk, which is near Leningrad, to Astrakhan, on the Caspian Sea.

When the steamer had started, the passengers discovered that there was no drinking water, no water to wash or bath in, and that the menu of the ship restaurant was restricted to vodka, pickles, and one variety of rather tasteless river fish.

At the end of their trip, the hundred passengers staggered ashore in search of anything to eat or drink—other than vodka, pickles or fish.—Reuter.

were dining together, but Marjorie was hostess.

"It really began about a month ago, when an old gentleman came into the shop and saw Mr. Fennett, the proprietor. They were together about ten minutes, and then I was sent for to the private office."

"Mr. Fennett told me that the gentleman had a special commission, and he wanted an expert to undertake some dyeing work." I didn't actually know for what purpose I was required until the next week, when his car came for me and I was driven to Baldoock.

"He asked me if I had brought the bleaching and dyeing material with me, and when I told him that I had, he let me into the secret. He said he was very fussy about the colour of horses, and he had a wonderful horse with white legs, and that he objected to white legs. He wanted me to dye the legs a beautiful brown."

"Of course, I laughed at first it was so amusing; but he was very serious, and then I was introduced to this beautiful horse."

"And you dyed his legs brown?"

She nodded.

"But that was not all. There was another horse whose legs had to be bleached. Poor dear, they will be bleached permanently unless he dyes them again. I know now, but I didn't know then, that it was a horse called Junket. Every few days I had to go to Baldoock and renew the dye and the bleach. Mr. Greyman made it a condition with Mr. Fennett that my commission should be kept a secret even from the firm, and, of course, I never spoke about it, not even to you."

"Then when I saw you in the car—"

"I was on my way to Baldoock to dye and bleach my two beautiful clients," she laughed. "I know nothing about race-horses, and I hadn't the slightest idea that the horse I had dyed was Yamen. In fact, until Mr. Jeans mentioned the word Baldoock, I had not connected the stable with the Derby."

"The morning after I left you I had an engagement to go to Baldoock to remove the dye. Mr. Greyman had told me that he had changed his mind and that he wanted the horse to have white legs again. And then I determined to speak to him and tell him just how you were situated."

"He told me the truth and he swore me to secrecy. He was reconciled to Lennox and told him all about Yamen. And then he discovered that Lennox did not believe him and was having the horse watched. He was so angry that in order to deceive his nephew's watchman, he had the horse's legs dyed and gave the tout's chance of seeing a poor junket, with his bleached legs, break down—as he knew would."

He told me he had backed Yamen to win him a great fortune."

"So you, of all people on Epsom Downs, knew that Yamen would win?"

"Didn't I back him?" asked the girl.

"Yes, but you didn't know his legs."

LATHAM'S REPORT

The report says that Australia's future is bound up with the East and that it is most improbable that Australia will do anything that might lead to war in the East.
If war occurred, it would be bound to affect Australia whether she was engaged in the war or not.
Australia's economic destiny, it adds, will be largely determined by her volume of trade with the East.—Reuter.
